AWR BOLSTERS ITS GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS CONSULTING GROUP

Firm Adds Shortell and Sobota, Expands Consulting Services to Government Contractors

McLean, VA — November 2007 — Argy, Wiltse & Robinson, P.C. (AWR), a rapidly-growing certified public accounting and business advisory firm, continues to strengthen its presence in the government contracting industry by adding eight experienced professionals to its burgeoning Government Contracts Consulting Group (GCCG). The move more than triples the size of the practice and augments the group's services to government contractors, which include compliance consulting, DCAA systems implementations, proposal preparation, and DCAA audit and litigation support.

"We are expanding our Government Contracts Consulting Group with a unique blend of the brightest, most talented professionals in the region," said Paul Argy, AWR's President & CEO. "This is a natural evolution for AWR, with the firm's roots being in the Government Contracting sector. Future opportunities for the GCCG are endless and we have aggressive plans for its rapid growth."

In the last three months, AWR has hired Amy Shortell and Eric Sobota as Senior Managers, as well as three experienced managers and three experienced senior staff. These new additions make AWR uniquely qualified to address the most complex issues given the unmatched mix of industry and government insight.

Amy Shortell has a varied background in government contracting. As a former DCAA auditor and lawyer, she is well-versed in the requirements of the Federal Acquisition Regulations and Cost Accounting Standards and their practical applications. Amy has served as an advisor to senior management and procurement officials on a wide variety government contract, financial, and DCAA audit issues. She is highly-skilled at providing financial and contract advice in the areas of commercial pricing, source selection, financial management, other transactions, claims and equitable adjustments, termination settlement proposals, bid protests, and litigation consulting.

Eric Sobota has extensive experience consulting with clients in government contracting and other industries, having previously worked in the government contracts consulting practice for a large, regional accounting firm. He works on a wide range of government contract compliance matters pertaining to the Federal Acquisition Regulation and Cost Accounting Standards. Eric has designed and advised on both DCAA required systems and cost accounting practices for many large contractors in addition to many other government requirements. He has also been admitted to the GAO for numerous bid protest matters, specifically providing insight into cost realism and other pricing issues.
